Read the article about a group of people in South Africa.

Looking good in South Africa

A lot of young men and women moved from the countryside to Johannesburg in the 1950s searching for a better life. (1) C Outside of work, these young people looked for a way to express their sense of pride and self-respect.

People needed something to help them forget about these problems. For some, the solution was to become Swenkas. This describes a group of people who share looking confident and stylish as a hobby. Although they may not have much money they always want to look really smart and elegant. (2) F There are important differences between the two though.

For example, Swenkas are a smaller group with their own particular culture. (3) A They don't wear bright colours but prefer expensive suits, which often have the name of a famous designer on the label. There is a lot of attention to small details too. Old-fashioned hats, colourful glasses, leather shoes, gloves and big metal watches are all popular accessories. (4) B Small items like these can be difficult to find and Swenkas spend days shopping around for them. They also need to try all these things on before they finally decide on the right one to buy.

An important moment in the week is the Saturday evening fashion show, which is free to the public but not the Swenkas, who pay to enter. (5) H The aim of every well-dressed competitor is to be smarter and more fashionable than the others. Sometimes the clothes that they're wearing can cost more than $1,000. This is a lot of money for someone who's earning $300 or $400 a month in a factory. During the contest, they walk around, dance and show their new clothes. When the show has finished, the audience votes on the best look and the winner is chosen. The following week, the competition takes place again with every Swenka hoping to win the prize.
