Read the texts about eight different sports.

A new you?A Bandy

Do you fancy playing bandy? It's a mix between ice hockey, field hockey and football. It's popular in Russia and Scandinavia. You play outdoors on ice and there are eleven players in each team. You try to hit a small round ball into a small goal with a stick. If you like football, you'll love bandy because the rules are exactly the same.

B Lacrosse

If you want to play lacrosse, you'll need a field, some special sticks with nets, gloves, a helmet and a few good friends. Lacrosse is a great team sport and there are different types. In some, you can have contact with another player but, in others, only the sticks can be in contact with each other. You can play either of these indoors or outdoors depending on the weather.

C White water canoeing

This is a great sport for a person who loves to be alone with nature and is looking for some real adventure. Most people know white water rafting, but that's for groups. Here it's just you, your strength, your skill and some really fast water. You'll need a swimming costume, life jacket and a really good helmet.

D Climbing

Climbing is a good way to really escape from everything ... and everyone. Climbing is a special skill and if you practise on an indoor rock face you'll soon be ready to try something more difficult. When you're up by yourself at 3,000 m with blue skies all around it's the best feeling in the world!

E Sepak Takraw

There's a big net and two teams, one on each side. If you've played volleyball, this might sound familiar. Well, in this sport you don't score points with your hands and arms but just your feet, so you need good football skills. There are five players on each side and it's the perfect winter sport for anyone who likes doing indoor activities and meeting new people.

F Cross-training

Want to try a bit of everything? Cross-training is perfect for anybody who gets bored just doing one sport all the time. In cross-training you can choose a fitness programme that's perfect for you. For example, do fifteen minutes on the track then a fast bike ride. The important thing is that you do lots of different activities in a thirty-minute or one-hour workout.

G Walking basketball

If the gym isn't for you or you can't run fast, try walking basketball. You just walk with the ball and pass it to someone in the team or try to score a basket in the usual way. It's great for older people who want to keep active and meet others.

H Tai Chi

This is a bit like karate, but it teaches you how to defend yourself rather than attack. It's good for people who have a lot of stress in their lives as our instructors will show you how to really relax. We meet in the gym on Saturdays and Sundays and you'll have the chance to practise with a small group of friendly people.
