Get your marked Unit 3 story back out. For each category below: if the teacher marked this kind of mistake in your writing, copy your sentence, fix it, then write ONE new sentence of your own using the same fix. If you didn't make this mistake, write "n/a" and move on — you don't need to invent an error you didn't make.

1. Story conventions — a clear beginning, middle and endWhat I wrote (or "n/a"):

Fixed version:

My own new sentence, same fix:

Reminder: your story must clearly be fiction, with a proper ending that solves the problem — never just stop, and avoid "it was all a dream".

2. Past perfect simple vs continuous

What I wrote (or "n/a"):

Fixed version:

My own new sentence, same fix:

Reminder: had been + -ing for duration or a process with a result; had + past participle for a single completed action.

3. Missing a required element (a celebrity / a mistake)

What I wrote (or "n/a"):

Fixed version:

My own new sentence, same fix:

Reminder: check both required elements against your plan before you start writing.

4. Weak or predictable endings

What I wrote (or "n/a"):

Fixed version:

My own new sentence, same fix:

Reminder: use a concluding phrase (Finally..., At long last..., In the end...) and a genuine result, ideally with a small surprise.

5. Word count (target: 140-190 words)

My word count (or "n/a" if within range):

Which paragraph needs more development?

One new sentence adding background or drama there:

Reminder: plan four paragraphs so the length comes naturally, rather than padding a finished draft.

6. Spelling & British English

What I wrote (or "n/a"):

Fixed version:

My own new sentence, same fix:

Reminder: British spelling throughout — colour, favourite, realise, organise.
