

Adapted from the official New Close-up B1 Unit 1 Assessment (National Geographic Learning / Cengage, permission granted to photocopy for classroom use), trimmed to 45 minutes for PET I's 14 Oct session. The writing task from the full 60-mark original is not included here — Unit 1's writing (SB p14-15, the email to Maria) was written in class earlier in this same session and marked separately, so testing writing again here would repeat that assessment rather than add to it.

Read the text about an interesting job.

The coolest job in the world!

What's it like to dive a thousand feet down in a small submarine in the ocean around the Galápagos Islands? National Geographic Explorer Jessica Cramp takes us on a journey to find out.

Jessica works on a project with National Geographic and Ecuador's government. F 'We need to make sure that we understand what's down there, so that we can work hard to protect it,' Jessica explains. On this dive, she is exploring the deep waters of Punta Vicente Roca. She is diving with two other women, the producer Maureen Dolan-Galaviz and submarine pilot Diana Garcia-Benito. H

It's not easy to go so deep in such a small submarine because you are locked in a very small space for hours. C 'There is no getting out once you're down 400 metres (1,312 feet),' Jessica says.

On the way down, they see lots of sharks. A They also see other sea animals such as sea lions and swordfish. When you are that deep, it's usually very dark, so a submarine with bright lights makes the animals curious.

D 'I have the coolest job in the world,' she says. This is especially true when she's deep down in the ocean. 'I've never felt as much like an explorer than I do right now in the submarine. There's something about being a thousand feet under the water, where no one else has actually ever been, that feels, I don't know, like true exploration.'

EXAM TASK

Five sentences have been removed from the text above. For each gap (1–5), write the letter of the correct sentence. There are three extra sentences which you do not need to use.

- A That's because the submarine actually attracts them.
- B Why are there only women on this dive?
- C So you have to plan things like going to the bathroom very carefully.
- D What does Jessica think of working as an explorer?
- E There are not many animals that deep in the ocean.
- F Its goal is to research deep areas in the ocean in order to save them.
- G Jessica loves her job but is also a bit anxious about going so deep.
- H This is probably the youngest all-female submarine diving team ever.
